

You may be interested in our free environmental volunteering opportunities for young people. I am pleased to say these great practical work outs for young people are on offer from BTCV in your area

We can arrange practical, outdoor environmental volunteering events for young people aged 16- 25 on local community sites. We organise the site, the work, and provide tools, materials and lead the event. You provide the young people and supervision at the ratio you risk assess for such activities.

There isn't a lot of paperwork, each young person will be required to complete two postcards – one with their details and one giving us feedback on the event and a photo consent form, so we can promote the work achieved by your group.

If you are interested in providing these opportunities for young people you work with, we suggest a taster first and then we can plan further one day events. If the group gets really keen there are grants of up to £10,000 for them to tackle a project of their own.

These opportunities are provided by BTCV free of charge thanks to funding from V and the Sita Trust.

Our local team will be happy to discuss possibilities with you. You can contact us on 02380 769719 or alternatively send a message to k.dudman@btcv.org.uk .

We are also offering limited free training places on our short course programme [except Domestic chainsaw courses] for people aged 16-25. To book your place, you will need to request a registration card from Ken Brown on 02380 769719 – please take a look a tour latest programme
